Denver – Physician Health Partners (PHP) and its managed entity, Colorado Community Health Alliance have partnered with Healthy Transitions Colorado to improve health care for Coloradoans. Healthy Transitions Colorado is a collaboration of community partners working to improve transitions of care and reduce hospital readmissions. Community partners will share resources, tools and education to accelerate and align efforts.

Healthy Transitions Colorado has a goal of preventing 8,700 Coloradoans from being readmitted to the hospital within 30 days of release. If achieved, it will result in happier patients and over $80 million in savings by July 1, 2015.

PHP and CCHA have been working toward the same goal with their respective populations and are excited to join forces with health care groups from across the state to improve population health, enhance patient experience and reduce costs.

“We are grateful for Healthy Transitions Colorado developing a program that will include so many health care entities from across the state,” Deb Munley, Senior Vice President of Physician Services said. “We think the collaborative spirit can result in new ideas and strategies to tackle a big issue.”

PHP works with more than 300 primary care physicians in the Denver metro area and its affiliated physicians serve more than 600,000 patients. PHP helps their physicians manage more than 50,000 Medicare and Medicare Advantage patients.

CCHA is a collaboration of Physician Health Partners, Primary Physician Partners and Centura Health. CCHA serves as the Region 6 Regional Collaborative Care Organization (RCCO) as part of the state’s Medicaid Accountable Care Collaborative (ACC). CCHA’s network provides care for Medicaid clients in Boulder, Broomfield, Clear Creek, Gilpin and Jefferson counties.
